Christ Community Lutheran School in Almena opened this school year, offering classical education. A solid back to the basics education of Reading, Writing, and Arithmetic will be central to the lower grades and continue into the upper grades. The study of History, Science, Music, and Language will form young minds to be upstanding citizens who can think for themselves. Godly, natural, & Biblical morals, of what is right and wrong, holy and evil, will mold young hearts to seek God. The curriculum and education at CCLS will be guided by its Consortium of Classical Lutheran Education Accreditation. The Study of God's Word and the Catechism, along with Worship, will mark the daily routines of the students. Pastor Ike Nicholson is the headmaster. They will also offer Christ Community Lutheran Cooperative, to build a community for classical homeschooling families in Northwest Wisconsin. Learn more at <https://christcommunityls.org/>.

Classical Enrichment

What we wish to avoid: "The person who sits with hunched shoulders.... Being a slave to a particular kind of work, this person will naturally become knowledgeable about one very specific subject. He knows exactly how to stack Widget A on top of Widget B."

What we seek to embrace: "As a student continues to learn not just geography but math, science, history, and literature, his mental map will hold not just cities and rivers but trees and weather systems, peoples and poems, fictional heroes and historical scoundrels. Educated in the classical manner, he will be able to situate all these little pieces into the whole of his learning, locating them somewhere on the map and locating himself in their midst, he will have a comfortable familiarity with them and an ease in handling new pieces that are similar to the ones he already knows. He will not panic when he cannot place them immediately because long experience has taught him that all the truths that are really true will ultimately fit together into a single map."
